Manager commentary – Q2 2025

IA Clarington QV Canadian Small Cap Class Series A returned 13.0%, relative to 11.8% for the S&P/TSX SmallCap Index over the past quarter. On a one-year basis, the return was 17.7% for the Fund, compared to 23.1% for the benchmark.

Equity markets have exhibited pronounced volatility year-to-date, with the Canadian Small Cap Index declining approximately 13% early in the quarter, only to fully rebound. While sentiment has improved, underpinned by increasing investor optimism and a continued compression in the risk premium, a range of macroeconomic and geopolitical risks persist. These include lingering uncertainty around trade negotiations and potential tariffs, escalating armed conflicts in several regions, and mounting pressure on fiscal balances to sustain growth. Volatility has also been a hallmark of global financial markets more broadly, impacting equities, bond yields, currencies and commodities. Notably, oil prices surged nearly 30% during the quarter amid heightened tensions between Iran and Israel, before retreating roughly 13% as the situation de-escalated. Likely owing to the high levels of uncertainty, the price of gold continued to appreciate over the quarter and, on a year-to-date basis, was the top-performing asset class globally.

Benchmark performance was broadly positive across all sectors during the quarter. The Fund's relative performance was primarily driven by strong stock selection in the consumer discretionary, real estate and health care sectors, which more than offset weaker contributions from the materials, industrials and utilities sectors. Top individual contributors to performance included Pet Valu Holdings Ltd., Aritzia Inc. and Andlauer Healthcare Group Inc., while the most significant detractors were PrairieSky Royalty Ltd, SECURE Waste Infrastructure Corp. and Knight Therapeutics Inc.

Andlauer Healthcare received a takeover offer from UPS at a 31% premium to its pre-announcement share price. While we are encouraged by the recognition of value reflected in the offer price, we are also disappointed to see a high-quality, long-term compounder exit the public markets.

The Fund increased its position in Telus Digital during the quarter, reflecting our conviction in its attractive risk/reward profile. Shortly afterwards, it received a preliminary acquisition proposal from its parent company, Telus Corp., at a 15% premium to its pre-announcement share price. However, the offer represents a significant discount to the company's IPO valuation and is below both its recent trading multiples and the acquisition multiples observed for comparable peers. We will monitor closely to see whether a revised proposal emerges.

We continued to add to our position in Cargojet Inc. early during the quarter, as the share price remained under pressure given negative sentiment surrounding potential trade restrictions and their impact on air cargo volumes. While we recognize the possibility of near-term disruption in U.S.–Canada trade flows, we believe this risk may be offset by increased trade activity with other international markets to which Cargojet is also meaningfully exposed. In addition, the company is supported by long-term, minimum volume contracts with most of its customers, providing a degree of earnings stability and downside protection.

Despite the passage of time, the future economic visibility continues to be limited. The market remains fixated on the next rounds of global economic negotiations set to ensue. While the market has recovered quickly, the impacts of persistent uncertainty on the future have yet to be fully seen in the economy.

The lagged effects of these risks suggest that the market’s recovery (and resulting reduced compensation for risk) may be premature, or reflective of an elevated risk appetite. While markets have “led” the real economy, consumers and corporations seem to be waiting for clarity on upcoming trade negotiations and the impacts of potential Canadian fiscal policy and coordination to support the Canadian economy.

We believe that the Fund, on aggregate, continues to be in a sound position, with further capital deployments improving diversification and resilience. In conjunction, holdings have not been idle, with meaningful business expansions announced from Definity Financial Corp., Knight Therapeutics, Stella-Jones Inc., etc. Some holdings have announced corporate actions to sell to strategic acquirers (Andlauer and Parkland Corp.), while others have navigated seemingly “terrible” outlooks better than expected (Evertz Technologies Ltd. and Aritzia).

While the Fund may underperform in “risk-on” or narrow markets driven by lower quality, it is intentionally positioned for an “all weather” or resilient outcome across a range of different scenarios. As highlighted last quarter, the diversified cash generation of holdings provides flexibility to pay a 2.6% dividend, reduce financial risk, or reinvest in growth for the upcoming decades.
